Cassazione op. 6

Jean Sibelius made his first sketches for material that would later find its way into Cassazione at the end of the 1890s; there are already hints of it among the sketches for the First Symphony, completed in 1899. Thereafter, snatches of Cassazione turn up again and again, woven into a number of works composed over a long period of time. These include the Violin Concerto (1903/04), Pohjola's Daughter (1906) and the Third Symphony (1907). The network of sketches for Cassazione stretched right up to the funeral march In memoriam of 1909 and the Jagd movement of the orchestral suite Scènes historiques II (1912).

Sibelius would appear to have composed – or compiled – Cassazione in a very short time in early 1904. No mention is made of a work of that name in his correspondence or other literary sources before the programme details for the premiere. In his letters to Axel Carpelan he had, however, referred to a piece called Intrada and Fantasia he was working on. He conducted the first performance of Cassazione as the opening number in a concert of his music held at the Helsinki University Hall on February 8, 1904. The main item on the programme, the Violin Concerto, understandably received most attention from the audience and critics, and Cassazione was regarded more or less just as a pleasant occasional piece. The unusual title spurred the critics to seek points of reference as far back as the Viennese Classical era.

The Cassazione heard in February 1904 was scored for an orchestra with double woodwinds, four French horns, two trumpets and three trombones. It was with an orchestra such as this that it was performed in Turku and Vaasa in March and April, as is evident from the date written on the third-horn part. No specific document remains to indicate when the arrangement for small orchestra was made: not even the year or whether it was ever performed. The date of this version has been deduced only by gathering together scraps of information found in other sources.

Cassazione was one of the works on the programme for a concert tour to Oulu made by Sibelius at the end of 1904. Nowhere is there any information about the orchestra, but Sibelius did tell his wife, Aino, in a letter after the rehearsal for the concert that he was worried because there was no cello. Using the arrangement for small orchestra, he therefore pencilled the cello solo into the parts for the first French horn and the double bass, presumably in case the performance had to manage without a cello. In that case, the solo could be played by the horn or double bass. The version of Cassazione for small orchestra must therefore have been heard at the end of 1904. This conclusion is supported by the fact that the other works performed on the tour were suitable for a small ensemble.

PROMOTIONAL COPY

Sibelius was already debating whether to publish Cassazione in 1905 already, but soon withdrew it. In the 1910s he added it to the list of his works awaiting revision. Though he never actually got back to it, he did reserve an opus number for it; this number would change a couple of times before being finalised in around 1930. In 1927 he used one of Cassazione's thematic motifs as the epilogue to his incidental music for The Tempest.

In the end, Sibelius did not appear to give either version of Cassazione priority, assigning the opus number six to both the original version for large orchestra and the one for small ensemble.

JEAN SIBELIUS, op. 6

Allegro moderato

Musical score for Flauti 1, 2, Oboi 1, 2, Clarinetti 1, 2 in Sib, and Fagotti 1, 2. The score consists of four staves. The first three staves have a treble clef, and the fourth has a bass clef. All staves are in common time. The notes are mostly rests.

Musical score for Corni 1, 2 in Fa, Trombe 1, 2 in Fa, Tromboni 1, 2, and Timpani. The score consists of four staves. The first two staves have a treble clef, and the last two have a bass clef. The notes are primarily sustained notes with dynamic markings like f, a 2 pesante, and pesante. The Timpani staff shows a rhythmic pattern of p and f.

Musical score for Violini I, II, Viole, Violoncelli, and Contrabbassi. The score consists of five staves. The first two staves have a treble clef, and the last three have a bass clef. The notes are primarily sustained notes with dynamic markings like f. A large graphic element is present on the right side of the page, featuring a dark grey shape with a white circle inside, partially obscuring the music.
